Heavy rains and water officials call end to drought

By PAUL WOLF

THERE HAS been resistance to making the call. Some hedging, lots of qualifying.

But water officials are taking the plunge: the drought, they say, is over.

"I think we can say that it is over now," said Darby Fuerst, water resources manager for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

And, for yet more affirmation, there is district General Manager Jim Cofer, who said, "Yes, I would safely say it is over, at least as far as the Monterey peninsula is concerned."

To be sure, Darby Fuerst has been one of those who has made a simple question complex, choosing to elaborate on the different definitions of drought, and stressing there is no formula to declare when one picks up and another leaves off.

Weather photos page 9

But going back to the start of Water Year '93 (which began Oct. 1), Fuerst has used runoff — rather than rainfall or any other factor — as the key measuring stick.

Perplexing question

Can the zoning issue be explained on a simple ballot?

By PAUL WOLF

IN ADVANCE of a referendum on the thorny downtown zoning issue, Carmel city officials are discovering they face a problem as old as democracy itself.

It is, specifically, this: How can a city explain a complex and technical subject in the form of a ballot question on which the public is to vote?

On Dec. 8, the Carmel City Council approved a comprehensive downtown zoning ordinance. It is, in coming weeks, expected to be the subject of a referendum. As it stands, a petition with more than 500 signatures awaits certification from the county elections office.

Analysis

The driving force behind the petition has been resident Al Eisner, who believes an expansion of the "central-commercial" zone, as authorized by the council's zoning package, would lead to greater commercialization in the village. The ref-

Strasser Kauffman opens lines with Washington

By PAUL WOLF

IN HER week-long excursion, Karin Strasser Kauffman passed through nearly every quarter of the nation's capital.

If it was networking the fifth district supervisor was doing in Washington D.C., it was that of the highest level.

And the goal of her trip — along with that of a troop of other county officials who shared her mission— was to establish "a line of communication" with the Clinton people, as the supervisor characterized it.

The subject: the conversion of Fort Ord, the region's biggest long-term concern — and arguably biggest promise.

"Fort Ord can be a success story for them as well as for us," Strasser Kauffman said, referring to all those overseeing the "economic conversion" of the nation as a whole.

Impressive itinerary

"They were very professional," she said of the Clinton transition officials she met. "And they want their new boss to be a success. They let us know our message was heard."

Strasser Kauffman was in Washington D.C. from Sunday, Jan. 3, through Satur-

Blinders

WE APPROACH the subject of the proposed "plaza" or "town square" in front of the 5th Avenue post office with delicate trepidation.

Only in its infancy, this idea seems to be debated on the merits of two optional designs. One option suggests occupying the entire street and using the existing parking lot as a kind of by-pass. The other option would use half of the street for a plaza and the other for traffic.

Immediate questions come to mind: Is either plan actually workable? What do the neighboring merchants think? What impact would either option have on the nearby residential areas? And what's the sentiment of the people who come to the post office?

But more important than the integral practicalities of the plan — if it is ever to be carried to completion — is the question of why?

At a time when the city has no money for frills, at a time when it should be seriously considering its future as a tourist destination with real merit, at a time when issues such as Rio Park (park?), Sunset Center and Pescadero Canyon should be resolved, why are we even thinking about a "plaza" or "town square" in front of the post office?

Why, indeed.

Number one priority

Dear Editor:

While everybody is focusing on the state of the nation's financial dilemma, we fail to look in our own backyards for errors in judgment by some of our local elected officials (past and present).

The city of Carmel is undergoing some soul-searching to resolve the financial hardship they are currently faced with. The high price they committed the city for the Hodges property, and the past and present elected members' determination to fight the State of California and CalTrans by opposing the Hatton Canyon Freeway doesn't add up to fiscal responsibility for a small village of some 4,500 souls.

It will be the better act of valor after evaluating the locked in long-term costs to the citizenry, to back out of this deal and hope that Clint Eastwood would be generous enough to offer the property's true value and come to the city's rescue.

They should also update their review of the many compromises made by CalTrans, and drop their participation in opposing the Hatton Canyon Freeway. A simple look at a map of the area will show that widening Highway 1 divides the geographical sphere of influence of Carmel. As the lone highway to Carmel Valley and Big Sur, it will expose future high school students and faculty to increased air and noise pollution, as well as increased traffic hazards for the students.

Perhaps, if they all lived east of the highway in south Carmel Hills or Handley Drive, they would appreciate the difficulty in getting onto the highway. This would be compounded by widening the highway. The existing highway should serve the local citizenry, while the Hatton Canyon as finally modified by CalTrans is intended to serve all California drivers and tourists.

The highway and our entire freeway system was designed to serve the entire state by creating a road system second to none. We should be grateful that state funding is available to improve our traffic congestion.

Why am I so concerned about this problem at my age? Because I have three young grandchildren who someday will attend Carmel High School and I don't want a state highway spewing all of the noise and harmful air pollution from auto and bus exhausts for them to be exposed to. Pie in the sky environmentalists can preach their siren songs of protecting the environment, and I say that my three granddaughters' health is of a number one priority.

Business as usual

Dear Editor:

This will respond to your recent editorial concerning Tom Oliver, the president of the Pebble Beach Company.

The gist of your editorial was your disbelief that Mr. Oliver's company has stood by him in the face of allegations made against him by the government, and the fact that Mr. Oliver has chosen to carry on his life as normally as he can. Shame on you. Mr. Oliver didn't just blow into town. He has devoted more than 26 years of his life to working with the residents of the Monterey Peninsula to make it a better and more beautiful place to live, and to make the Pebble Beach Company a good neighbor.

The allegations against him are just that, and, until they are proven — if ever — he is entitled to the presumption of innocence shared by all Americans, and to the confidence and well wishes of the many thousands of peninsula residents whose lives have been enriched by the dedication and hard work of Mr. Oliver.

PG Kiwanis

Dear Editor:

The recent closing of Ford's Department Store in Pacific Grove resulted in the loss of a meeting place for the Kiwanis Club of Pacific Grove. The club, one of eight Kiwanis Clubs on the Monterey Peninsula, had been meeting at the Belvedere restaurant on the top floor of now closed Ford's store for a breakfast meeting each Tuesday morning at 7:30 for the last five years.

The club will now meet at the Sally Judd Griffin Center on 700 Jewell Ave. at the same time each Tuesday morning.

Paul Heitz, current president of the club, advises that the club will continue with its charitable programs in Pacific Grove such as support for the local high school, downtown beautification, adoption of David Avenue Kindergarten, Meals on-Wheels delivery support and many other valuable community projects. One project the club feels especially proud of is the smoke detector program insuring every house in Pacific Grove had a working smoke detector.

Survey reveals habits of Harrison Library patrons

By PAUL WOLF

OVER HALF of the users of the Harrison Memorial Library make use of its inter-library loan service and four out of five "shop or use professional services" en route to and from the library.

These are a couple of the findings of a Carmel public library survey conducted in November. Its results were made public this week.

The survey also found that 55 percent of adults who use the library use a home or office computer. Roughly 65 percent of those under 19 use a computer.

"This kind of information will help our strategic planning committee make recommendations to the library board," said Assistant Library Director Lettie Bennett.

The five-member board, set up last years, meets twice a month.

The survey was published in The Carmel Pine Cone and The Weekly Sun. In addition, it was distributed to Carmel High School students and made available at the library. In all, 280 surveys were returned.

Some of the results were, more or less, to be expected. For example, 56.8 percent of the adult respondents were age 60 or older. The most popular subjects of books checked out were biography, fiction, current best sellers, history and travel, science and home and garden.

Role of marketing

"An important part of what the library does is marketing," Bennett said. "So you better know about your population so you can do a good job."

One of the key findings was that the inter-library loan network, which pools the books and materials of libraries through the county is well-used. Roughly 52 percent of adults avail themselves of the MOBACAT technology, the informational link between the participating public and private libraries. MOBAC is the name of the network.

If one library doesn't have something, another will. And if no member library has it, the central office will locate it. In an abstract sense, the little library on Ocean Avenue is far bigger than it would appear.

The Harrison Memorial Library pays $6,000 a year to be a MOBAC member.

"It is, as you can see, some of the best money we spend," Bennett said.

Bennett admits the survey would have been more valuable if more questionnaires could have been distributed, returned and tabulated.

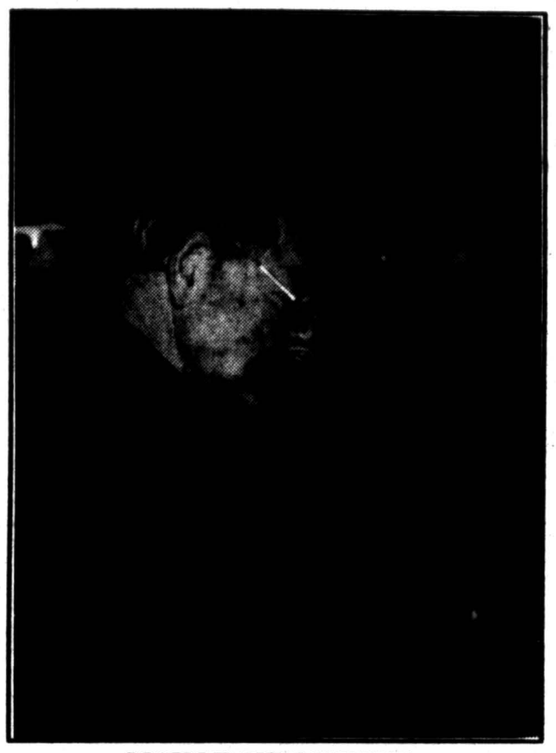
Unfortunately, due to budget constraints, library officials had no funds to put into the project.

With Panetta's ascent, Mello says he has big shoes to fill

By PAUL WOLF

STATE SENATOR Henry Mello, poised to fill Leon Panetta's shoes at the Fort Ord Task Force, says he is accustomed to following in the footsteps of the congressman.

For more than a decade and a half, the straight-talking senator has found himself at functions where he has the dubious fortune of speaking immediately after the "very eloquent" (Mello's words) Leon Panetta.



MAYOR KEN WHITE

About becoming task force chairman and replacing the veteran congressman, Mello admitted, "It's an awesome task."

But while his influence is statewide rather than nationwide, he may, like Panetta, have the ability to unite conflicting local interests to underscore common regional concerns.

"I would like to carry out the goals he (Panetta) has set forth," said Mello, speaking in a phone interview with The Carmel Pine Cone.

Panetta remains congressman until he is confirmed for his position as director of the Office of Management and Budget in the Clinton Administration.

Like Panetta and unlike the mayors who belong to the 14-member task force, Mello represents "a broad constituency... From my position, I can look at the whole plan (for the reuse of Fort Ord)."

Mello, who described himself as an advocate of "orderly growth," is looking forward to the public hearings to be scheduled in weeks to come — sounding out the proposed uses for the former army territory.

He described Panetta, whose last meeting was Jan. 15, as "a perfectionist and very eloquent." Over three years, he has laid a solid ground for making the redevelopment a success.

The Carmel perspective

Carmel mayor, Ken White, who serves as Carmel's representative on the task force, applauded the venerated congressman choice for his successor.

"I think Leon Panetta had to pick someone with stature and the ability to open doors, and Henry obviously has that," White said.

Meanwhile, White said he agreed with the prevailing sentiment at the meeting Jan. 15, when task force members agreed no part of Fort Ord would make a good site for a federal prison. Officials from the federal Bureau of Prisons had come to make their pitch.

White agreed a certain level of the NIMBY (Not-in-My-Backyard) syndrome may have been at work. Nevertheless, because tourism is the peninsula's — and Carmel's — primary industry, "it is not a good idea." There are, he said, other areas in the county where the communities may actually welcome a prison, which could provide jobs.

Moreover, White argued the federal prison concept "is not compatible" with the current leading hope for a part of Fort Ord land — namely, building a new California State University campus.

Bialek resigns from CUSD board after 15 years of service

By SCOTT BREARTON

AFTER MORE than 15 years with the Carmel Unified School District, Hilton Bialek has resigned due to "family and personal matters."

Bialek served on Carmel's five-member school board two separate times, from 1963-1971, and from 1985 until his announcement last week. He has served as president "a number of times," as board members regularly rotate their positions.

Bialek's departure was announced by CUSD President Frank Pinney at a somber board meeting Jan. 14. Pinney read Bialek's letter of resignation to fellow school board members:

"...I find that because of family and personal matters I am unable to devote the energy and time I feel the position requires. My decision has been made easier by the knowledge that the district is in the hands of extremely capable and competent people..."

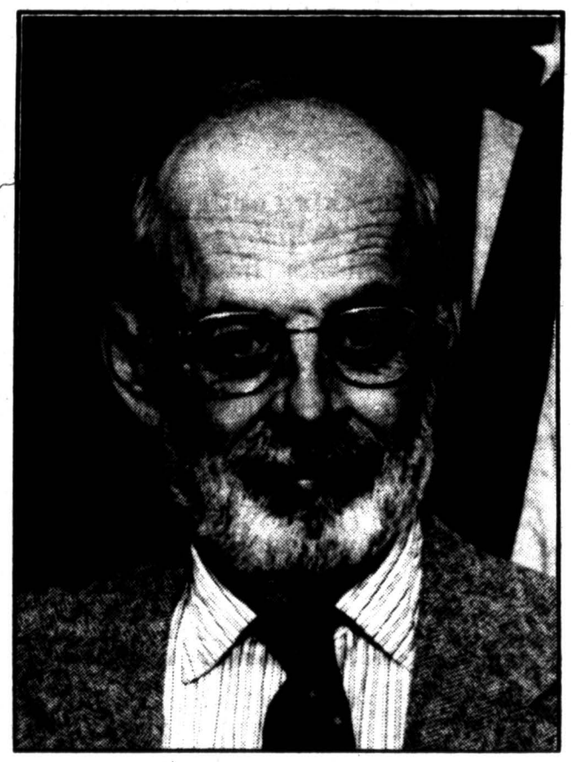
During a telephone interview Jan. 18, Bialek reflected on his many years with the CUSD and his reasons for stepping down.

"I think, during the last period (from 1985 - present), we established a high level of motivation and morale in the school district," Bialek said. "We got people to work together... I've been very pleased with the people we've hired to run the district, and I'm very proud of the school district's accomplishments.

"I've just gotten to the point in my life where it's time to do something else," Bialek continued. "I've gotten a lot out of my position with the school board, but it's time for somebody else to do it now."

The board may either appoint someone to the position or call for a special election to fill Bialek's vacancy. CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin is expected to announce the process for filling the seat at the next board meeting Jan. 28. Bialek was to serve on the board until Nov. 1985, when his term officially expired.

"We will be reporting further action at future board meetings regarding his submittal," Pinney said. "We are very sad."



HILTON BIALEK

Board member Gary Gray offered similar sentiments.

"I just want to express my profound sense of personal loss at Hilton's departure," Gray said. "The viewpoint he provided was very valuable."

In other action...

The board briefly discussed plans for remodeling the Carmel High School entrance and parking lot, a plan first initiated by the Associated Student Body that has been slow to get off the ground. But the district has stepped in to try and make the student idea a reality.

"We have an engineer's plan," said Baldwin. "We're in the process of getting quotes. I think we have a good master plan."

The plan would provide more parking spaces, improve the appearance of the campus entrance, and reduce congestion in the parking lot, according to Baldwin. Among the improvements will be a "roundabout," or circular loading zone, and a

Domestic, not rain water, to flow in Pebble Beach area

THE PEBBLE Beach Community Services District Fire Department and Cal Am Water Company will be conducting fire hydrant water flow tests next week.

The tests, throughout Pebble Beach, will be made Jan. 25 through Jan. 29, according to Robin S. Hamelin, fire captain for the district.

"Because these tests require flowing water from various hydrants, personnel will take precautions to eliminate or minimize damage caused by the water flows," Hamelin said. "Residents should be aware that landscaping growing too close to hydrants may have to be trimmed or removed."

About 20 percent of the hydrants in Pebble Beach are tested each year, according to Hamelin.

Drought is over (again)

This wet season the peninsula has needed 27,000 acre feet of runoff to be out of drought. It appears we may have achieved that level already, even though we are only halfway through the rainy season.

With the ground so parched, it took a while for the runoff figures to match impressive rainfall data. For instance, after the first three months of the water year, rainfall was normal but flow was well below normal.

As it stands now, runoff has approached normal, and rainfall so far this year has been remarkable.

Up to 8 a.m. Jan 18, there have been 11.8 inches of rain recorded at the San Clamente dam, compared to a normal of 4.1. If this month picks up another three-and-a-half inches, it will beat the record reading dating back to January 1969.

Water Director Jim Hughes, speaking in a telephone interview, is a little more caution about declarations. "I am cautiously optimistic. I do think we are in good shape. But a lot of our trees and foliage are stressed, and the fish (in the Carmel River) need help."

On the question of the drought's end, Hughes said the only time properly to respond is in April.

Yet, for the moment, there are some true watersheds. The Carmel River is raging and flowing into the sea. The reservoirs are topping over. And water rationing within the district, as of July, is a thing of the past.

Asked how the conclusion of the drought could pass so unceremoniously, Cofer noted that limited water supply capacity of the district means it is perennially vulnerable. "We have to remember that within two years, we can be back in rationing again."

Zoning question poses ballot language challenge

With notable apprehension, city officials are beginning to talk about what kind of ballot language voters will encounter when they step into the booth this spring.

How can a brief, neutral ballot statement — along with a couple of pro and con arguments and the original language of Eisner's petition, — simplify a multifaceted ordinance, the product of years of study and debate?

Its many parts

Consider the areas the ordinance deals with: zoning lines, uses within zones and the permit review process. Then there are the intangibles, like whether the "service-commercial" district, established in 1984, has been a worthwhile experiment.

The ordinance does not only expand the CC district, which is the main bone of contention; it deals with "many of the things people have been asking for over the last two and a half years," as White described it.

These demands have included streamlining the permit process, putting "caps" on many central commercial uses, and easing the burdens on the planning department staff.

It will be City Atty. Don Freeman who will have the unenviable task of formulating the neutral analysis for the ballot. That statement is unlikely to run longer than about 400 words.

Asked about the task before him, Freeman admitted, "I haven't the foggiest idea (how I'm going to write it). I haven't thought about it yet."

"We are hoping the city attorney will use all of his skills to draft the ballot measure so people will know what it's about, and he has a formidable task," Eisner said. "It is going to have to be broken down simply."

'We are hoping the city attorney will use all of his skills to draft the ballot measure so people will know what it's about...'
—Al Eisner

Mayor Ken White, too, acknowledged the daunting challenge. "You've put your finger on the problem that I am worried about," he said.

Actually, there isn't a prayer the ballot question will be able to spell out everything the zoning ordinance authorizes. Most likely, it will ask voters simply whether they support the ordinance or wish its repeal.

If voters throw out the ordinance because they object to the shifting of zoning lines, they throw out many housekeeping and procedural provisions as well. People on both sides of the issue agree that would be unfortunate.

All or nothing

And, if the referendum succeeds, these provisions cannot be taken up separately by the city council until a full year has passed since the vote. In other words, the referendum truly will be an all-or-nothing affair.

The RC zone is restricted to businesses that fundamentally serve residents rather than tourists. While the CC zone has extended nearly to 7th Avenue on its southern border, the council voted to move it all the way to 7th. That decision was the most controversial part of the ordinance.

The council's aim was to correct the "injustices" put on such commercial properties as the Leidig building and Vandervort Court (across the street from Nielsen Bros. Market) when they were "downzoned" in 1984.

Such commercial property owners saw their tenant options narrowed without their consent, and the resentment has built up over the years.

City officials — and Al Eisner too — may have answered the question of how to contend with the shortcomings of a ballot: The community must do its homework ahead of time.

Workshops and special study sessions are already in the works.

"I don't think there is any way people can understand this (in the voting booth)," said Councilwoman Barbara Livingston.

Councilman Bob Fischer agreed. "The ordinance is very complex, and obviously we have to go along with this referendum. I would have hoped we could deal with just the one issue."

Fischer was referring to the provision to widen the CC district. The petition, however, addresses the ordinance as a whole.

With regret, Mayor White said "personalities rather than issues" have so far dominated the commercial zoning issue. White, Fischer and others worry that political fighting, rather than informed debate, will dominate the campaign.

If that is so, then Eisner is right when he predicts: "I think this will be a classic election campaign."

Councilwomen keep hope of zoning ordinance's repeal

By PAUL WOLF

TWO COUNCIL members, hoping to avoid the expense and rancor of a special election, say they may ask the full council if it would repeal the controversial zoning ordinance.

But phone calls to the other three council members by The Carmel Pine Cone suggest there isn't enough support on the five-member council.

Mayor Ken White and Councilmen Bob Fischer and Phil Coniglio are not interested.

"I am hoping the council will repeal the ordinance," said Livingston in a phone interview.

She and Brooks support the council's formation of a general plan review committee to study the zoning issue along with the myriad of subjects that inevitably would fall within the scope of such a group.

Checking options

As it turns out, members of the Carmel Planning Commission have already expressed interest in a such a committee, although their discussions have not centered on the commercial zoning issue per se. Rather, some of commissioners note it has been about four years since the Carmel General Plan has been reviewed.

"We do have the option of rescinding the ordinance, and that is something we have to decide if we want to do," said Brooks in a phone interview. "I am thinking about it (bringing this up). I am open to the idea.

Similarly, Livingston said, "It would avoid a lot of divisiveness and rancor (from the special election), and save the city about $1,200."

The option becomes especially relevant considering the fact that the Carmel Planning Commission in recent days discussed the value of opening the general plan process, even though the commission was not discussing a committee in light of the specific zoning controversy.

Meanwhile, Mayor Ken White noted it was an option of the council's to "back off the ordinance," but there is "no chance I would propose that."

Livingston and Brooks believe that, if the ordinance is repealed, the non-controversial elements of the ordinance could be adopted, and the controversial aspects of the zoning package meanwhile be studied further.

"I don't like it," said Councilman Phil Coniglio. "I voted for what I believed. This would put us back to day one."

Likewise, Bob Fischer said repealing the ordinance "would put us back to square one...To back away is wrong. It took two-and-a-half years as it is. I think a referendum would finally settle the matter."

'Environmental pilgrimage'

THE CARMEL-based Concerned Citizens for Environmental Health are leading a pilgrimage to a local shop that sells only "green" products.

On Monday, Jan. 25, the group, led by member Brian Rosen, will meet city officials in front of the Carmel Fire Station, which will be the start of a somewhat unconventional outing for city officials. They will travel by bus to Carmel Rancho Shopping Center to visit Enviro Care.

While the group has been making the arrangements, the outing, explained Rosen, was prompted by comments made by at least two Carmel City Council members who have expressed the hope that the city could institutionalize the use of more environmentally sensitive products.

Councilwoman Barbara Livingston, for one, is enthusiastic about the trip.

Rosen has appeared almost monthly before the city council, urging people to ride the bus more, or to recycle, or to adopt a number of greener habits.

Planning to come along, besides a number of council members, are Public Works Director Jim Cullem and City Forester Gary Kelly.

Rosen said the public is welcome to come as well.

Councilman Bob Fischer wasn't enthusiastic about the whole thing, saying, "I am not participating. If a want to look at some shop, I will do it myself."

"The only thing that's really holding us up right now is the weather," Baldwin added.

In other action, the board:

•Authorized the purchase of one 84-passenger school bus for the sum of $82,906, and one 20-passenger minivan, for the sum of $28, 155. The minivan will be acquired through a cooperative purchase with the Dixie Elementary School District's bidding process. The total purchase price for both buses will be $111,061, plus sales tax.

•Accepted November warrants totaling $318,400.

•Approved five new Macintosh computer classes, which will be offered at the Carmel Adult School during the spring semester. A "home firearm safety" course will also be offered by Geoff Malloway, Carmel Adult School fly fishing instructor.

•Adopted a revised policy regarding immunizations.

•Awarded a bid for the purchase of an emergency communication system for CUSD schools.

day, Jan. 9. And she went with an impressive itinerary.

For starters, she and other county officials met with some of Bill Clinton's transition people to talk about base closures and how to ensure they are done in an intelligent fashion.

There was a lengthy roundtable meeting with members of the transition team in which representatives of the National Association of Counties attempted to express their concerns and "speak with one voice," explained Strasser Kauffman.

"The discussion was pleasant because the goals were shared by everyone. I was impressed with the Clinton transition. They knew our situation with Fort Ord. They did their homework. We've established a line of communication."

On Monday, Jan. 18, she watched Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Monterey, tell senators about his budget priorities in order to win their confidence. Those senators will pass on a recommendation about Panetta's confirmation to the directorship of the Office of Management and Budget.

"I met with his staff to make sure Leon can follow up (on the Fort Ord issue). He will, after all, be intimately involved with this issue of economic conversion as OMB director, and that will be very helpful to us."

In addition, Strasser Kauffman met with a variety of high-level officials who could be influential in helping find funds for the conversion of Fort Ord.

One was Bob Stone, a department of defense official who has made a reputation for himself in parring down oversized bureaucracy. Two others were Barbara Boxer and Diane Feinstein, California new Democratic U.S. Senators.

Strasser Kauffman hopes they can help secure $100 million to help in the conversion of the base.

In all, it was a whirlwind of meetings and networking. Said the supervisor: "Fort Ord is going to take 10 to 20 years to (convert and redevelop), but we have to lay the ground work now."

Now in its seventh year, CMS science fair is big hit

By SCOTT BREARTON

ERIN MILLER, Jennifer Schock, and Jay Morris, representing the eighth, seventh, and sixth grades respectively, took home top honors as grand prize winners in the Carmel Middle School Science Fair held last week.

More than 500 CMS students participated in the annual event, which culminated in an awards ceremony Jan. 14.

All CMS students are required to submit a project in the competition, now in its seventh year. The first step is to formulate a hypothesis, then develop an experiment to either prove or disprove their original assertion. A written report accompanies a visual display illustrating their experiment.

Teachers interview students before grading the projects to determine how much was learned from the process, and how much help they may have received from their parents.

They can enter their projects in five different categories, depending on their field of interest: chemistry, behavioral science (including environmental science, medicine, and health), zoology (including microbiology), physics and engineering, and botany.

About 80 judges from the scientific community helped evaluate the projects, including former students, doctors, veterinarians, and Naval Postgraduate School professors.

"The whole point of doing this is to introduce and have them be able to apply the scientific method to life," said Craig Hohenberger, an eighth-grade science teacher at CMS. "A lot of science is actually doing it and the discovery of doing it," he said.

Students seem to agree the fair is beneficial.

"I think you learn more in the science fair instead of being in class," said Schock, who conducted an experiment testing which chemicals would best prevent a fabric from fading after tie-dyeing. "If I study and work on one thing for a long time, I remember more of what I learned."

According to Hohenberger, about one-third of CMS students will enter their projects in the Monterey County Science and Engineering Fair, which will be held the weekend of March 26-28.

MPC is the best buy in Higher Education!

Enrollment fees have increased. The general enrollment fee is now $10 per unit; students holding a B.A. degree or higher will be charged a $50 per unit differential fee.(Displaced homemakers, dislocated workers, or those receiving public assistance may be eligible for a waiver of the $50. per unit deferential fee.) Classes are small and available. Instruction is top quality!

While MPC students without a degree will pay $150 a semester to take 15 units of classes, the same class load would cost in excess of $780 at San Jose State University; $1,042 per quarter at UC Santa Cruz, and $5,512 per quarter at Stanford.

Even with higher enrollment fees, MPC is the best buy in higher education !

Chris Wood, who has a Bachelor's degree in biology, was an Assistant Dean at Cal Tech in Pasadena eight years ago when she suffered a spinal injury and was totally disabled. Enrolled in French and Special Education classes at MPC, she values the high quality of teaching, low cost, and diversity of the student body.

"I have always loved learning and continuing my education. A Vietnamese woman I know suggested I enroll in a French class at MPC. It was a very pleasant surprise to find such a good course at such a reasonable price at MPC. The instructors here challenge their students. Ch me Fait Travailler les méninges. (That makes me work my brain cells)

"Taking classes at MPC means I am again able to associate with people from various cultures."

"You can bet your bottom dollar I'll be back next semester. Compared with the cost of studying languages at other institutions, MPC is a real bargain."

CHS' Danielle Wall named student of month

DANIELLE WALL, a junior at Carmel High School, has been named student of the month by the English Department. She has maintained a 4.0 grade point average during her three years at CHS.

Wall is also an avid runner. She is the Mission Trail Athletic League cross-country champion and the Division IV Central Coast Section champion in cross-country. She is also the M.T.A.L. 3200 meter champion in track.

Wall also plays the flute in the CHS concert and jazz bands, studies advanced French, and tutors River School students weekly with her Honors American History class.

Wall's future plans include competing in track and cross-country at the collegiate level. While she hasn't narrowed her choices to one school or major yet, Wall said she is interested in earning a math or science degree.

"My coach and I are going over a list of schools that are ranked highly academically and have good running programs, such as Stanford and Dartmouth," she said.

Highway 1 reopened

HIGHWAY 1 was reopened Tuesday at 7:30 a.m. Caltrans crews worked over the weekend to remove the last of the 1,500 tons of slide debris which closed the highway last Thursday morning. The slide occurred at Limekiln Creek, 23 miles south of Big Sur.

Caltrans advises motorists to drive with caution on Highway 1, keeping a lookout for rocks which might have fallen onto the highway. Rockfall activity increases during periods of rain and continues even after the rain has stopped as water continues to seep into the cliffs loosening rocks and rock clusters, according to Caltrans officials.

Desal election top item at water district meeting

By PAUL WOLF

THE GENERAL manager of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is confident the June 8 election on the proposed Sand City desalination plant will become reality.

When the water board meets Thursday, Jan. 28, desalination will be a top agenda item. The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. at the Monterey City Council Chambers.

General Manager Jim Cofer said he is confident for a number of reasons.

For starters, all the city councils within the water district's jurisdiction are moving forward in authorizing the election for within their turf. The water district needs the cities' cooperation if it is to create a "benefit zone" for the desalination plant.

In addition, the board, at the meeting, will receive a draft engineers' report on the Sand City plant — another necessary prelude to the June 8 vote.

Approving final EIR

Perhaps the big item for the project will be the board's own certification of the final environmental impact report. That action is expected without much debate.

The election would ask citizens whether they wish to authorize the $30 million project. It would supply water to the district spanning from the southern portion of Fort Ord and Seaside at the north end and to the Carmel Highlands at the south end.

The board has not voted to support or oppose the plant. However, with Director Dick Heuer's recent announcement that he will campaign against the project, it is clear that the water board's support is not unanimous.

In other matters, the board will:

• Hear a brief presentation from an official from the California-American Water Co. on the status of the long-delayed Paralta well in Seaside.

•Directors will be informed about the progress of testing at the well — which once had a completion date of June 1992. "I think it will be the end of the year by the time the project is operational," said Cofer.

The new well is the immediate hope for allowing the water district to lift its moratorium on new connections.

• Consider a recommendation by Financial Advisory Committee to increase water connection charges by roughly 40 percent. The increase would go to financing such projects as the desalination plant and a new dam on the Carmel River, which is the long-term hope for increasing water supply.

•Consider directing water district staff to revise the current drought reserve policies. There will be no public hearing on this item, as it is a largely technical matter relating to drought provisions that were formulated over the past couple of years.

Carmel Valley Outlook

CV Ranch Resort

Federal agency files Chapter 11 for local resort

By SUSAN BECK

A NEW twist in the latest goings on at Carmel Valley Ranch Resort has Nick Marotta ready for battle.

Marotta, owner of 12.5 percent of the exclusive resort, has repeatedly declared the resort's solvency despite that fact that its parent company, Landmark Land Co., is bankrupt and in Chapter 11.

The latest report from the federal Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC), which has taken over the reorganization of Landmark Land Co., states that, as of last month, Carmel Valley Ranch Resort is also in Chapter 11.

RTC claims that the failed Oak Tree Federal Savings and Loan in New Orleans, La., which advanced millions of dollars to Landmark Land, also advanced money to Carmel Valley Ranch.

"You can't make a legal loan without a secured note," said Marotta. "And, there is no record of a deed of trust against the Carmel Valley Ranch."

Felisa Neuringer, spokeswoman in Washington, D.C. for RTC, said that the valley resort was insolvent long before the federal agency got involved.

"Carmel Valley Ranch was operating at a deficit cash flow," said Neuringer, "and they accepted advanced loans through Oak Tree Savings and Loan to stay in business." She could not disclose the exact figures for the alleged loans.

"Why are there no encumbrances against the ranch?" said Marotta. "I've been checking periodically for the last 15 years and no one has produced a recorded deed of trust against Carmel Valley Ranch. I never agreed to any encumbrances against my stock. In my opinion, we are still very solvent."

Marotta said that the RTC is talking $79 million.

"The mysterious $79 million or "funny money" are funds that Landmark Land Co. said they spent on Carmel Valley Ranch."

He added that Charles Bates, in charge of liquidation for RTC, agreed to reduce the amount to $35 million.

"I would not accept," said Marotta. "Landmark's 87.5 percent is encumbered. My share is not. Now, they say I owe part of the $79 million."

David Hollingsworth, Marotta's attorney, said that to date the only encumbrance against Carmel Valley Ranch Resort is a $350,000 deed of trust.

He added that the $79 million claim is also being made against five other Landmark Land Co. properties as well.

"The claim on six different bankruptcy proceedings for that one debt is a very resounding admission that it is not owed entirely by Carmel Valley Ranch," said Hollingsworth.

RTC has its own agenda to liquidate distressed sales quickly, he said, but "our program is to work out a well-conceived and thought out gradual liquidation."

Neuringer said initially the RTC didn't file Chapter 11 for Carmel Valley Ranch because, "when we went in, we thought we could deal with the membership without filing."

She added that consolidating the resort into the main bankruptcy case in Charleston, S.C. allows the RTC to effectively and equitably deal with the lifetime members and homeowners when trying to sell off the property.

It was previously thought that the marketing process would begin in February, but March looks more realistic with perhaps a sale early in the summer.

"It's nuts," said Marotta. "You might as well say its $1 billion. In my opinion, Landmark Land is saying this to stay out of jail. There's nothing to prove it. It doesn't exist, and I'm going to fight it."

THE EXCLUSIVE Carmel Valley Ranch Resort has been operating on borrowed time according to the RTC. (Susan Beck photo)

Pacific Meadows

View from afar continues to be point of displeasure

By SUSAN BECK

THE PROSPECT that it may be the next generation before there is any relief from the visual impact of Pacific Meadows Retirement Community in Carmel Valley has at least one local resident disappointed.

Fran Farina was hiking on the south mountain range opposite the 200-unit complex and discovered that there was no change in the view screen that was supposed to be forthcoming.

"I had hoped to at least see something green," said Farina.

She said that the Carmel Valley Master Plan dictates that structures are to be screened from sight from either side of the valley to maintain a natural setting.

Property owners discuss downside of desalination

By SUSAN BECK

FOR SOME, a desalination plant in Sand City is not the way to go about solving the water problems on the Monterey Peninsula.

But, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is pushing to tag along on the June 8 redistricting ballot for a vote on desalination.

At the Jan. 13 Carmel Valley Property Owners Association meeting, several board members expressed their concerns.

"I'm dubious about the projected $27.1 capital cost," said Patricia Bernardi. "And, the several million dollars a year for operating and maintenance."

Even though the desalination plant is expected to operate three months out of the year, she said, the capital improvement and operating cost will be included in on the water bill every month, "forever."

"Desal is wonderful, but the power cost are astronomical for what you get."

Other options available for peninsula water users are Seaside's Paralta well and a new Los Padres dam. The Paralta well is the most immediate solution, but is not available for use because the city of Seaside is in the process of establishing an environmental impact report.

A desalination plant is considered the next most viable water supply project with the new dam being the set for sometime 10 years from now at an estimated cost of $95.1 million.

Roger Williams said that the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board was hasty in their assessment of a desalination plant's operational costs.

"I never got a complete understanding as to how they arrived at the figures," he said, "It seemed quite nebulous"

Bernardi added that at this point her standby water charges cost more than the water she uses.

The service charge on her last two-month bill was $18.50. The surcharge was $3, and the cost for the water was $16.16. She said that her family of five

Charleen Dean, the administrator of Pacific Meadows, said that that the landscaping plan required by the county was complied with.

The landscaping work was orginally to be done in November of 1991 with a $31,000 budget, but Pacific Meadows was granted a waver do to the lack of sufficient water.

In July of 1992 the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District allocated the water necessary to get the landscape work started.

"We planted many different sizes of trees to provide a natural barrier, enhance the facility, and protect against erosion," said Dean. "There was no time frame on how long it would take."

Farina is troubled because most of the trees planted at Pacific Meadows are only one gallon trees.

"There is a preponderance of seedlings not more than 18 inches high and a few trees about five or six feet high," she said. "If county planning only requires one gallon trees for landscaping, then we have been shafted."

Dean said that the time frame may not be comfortable to those in disagreement with what was done at Pacific Meadows.

"I don't know what their expectations are. This should not be something new. I thought this issue was finalized. Apparently, not so," she said. "Everything was done according to the original plan, and we are right on target. If there is more to be said, so be it."

Farina said that she is truly disappointed.

"I'm going to be an old lady before there is a view screen provided from these plants."

Desalination is last resort, not first choice

uses a conservative 129 gallons per day.

If you factor in the additional cost of paying for a desalination plant, she said, "the cost will probably be double what the public is going to be told. The numbers are soft. We need to look at this very carefully."

Bernardi went on to say that the California State Water Resources Control Board is also extremely concerned about Carmel Valley's water situation.

"The state wants desalination, and it makes me nervous," said Bernardi. "The vote on desal will be looked at by the state with scrutiny in terms of water on the peninsula. If desal is turned down, the state can enforce a permanent moratorium or cut back on water being used now."

Pete Salmonsen made another point at the meeting. He said that a desalination plant might thwart the proposed Los Padres dam project. "We don't need the damn desal, we need the dam."

Bernardi reiterated that the main drawback with desalination is the cost. "Desal is the solution only if you have nothing else. I don't think desal is the best project here."

She also told the board that, "We may end up having some repercussions because of the formal complaints made by various local groups such as the Residents Water Committee, which Bernardi is a member, to the state board in Sacramento last August.

"I would hate for us to get into a catch-22: damned if you do, damned if you don't."

Understanding Golf

By JANET COLES

SIDE HILL LIES: Always remember to handle side hill lies or slight slopes through set-up adjustments. Add swing changes only when the slopes are severe. Again, for simplicity and consistency, minimize departures from your basic swing.

Part 3 — THE UP HILL LIE

Slight Slopes:

1. Incline your body away from target until you (especially shoulders and hips) are perpendicular to the slope's terrain. This produces a level lie.
2. Put more weight on rear hip or trailing leg.
3. Make a practice swing and take a divot to determine where to position the ball relative to your feet.

Severe Slopes:

1. Take sufficient club (normal seven iron shot, hit five iron) to allow for higher ball trajectory.
2. Sit back slightly on rear hip to prevent falling down slope.
3. To improve balance and club control, swing well within yourself (mostly hands, wrists, arms to minimize full body swing.)
4. Allow for the ball to pull to the left.

Padre Sports Review

By James Genone

Slumping Padres drop two in a row

AFTER WINNING their first league game and amassing 11 non-league wins, the Carmel boys' basketball team has fallen into a slump. They lost two games last week, one to current league leader Alisal, and the other to a weak Gonzales team.

Coming off a last-second win over a traveling team from Australia, the Padres looked to be tough as they met Alisal in Salinas last Tuesday. Unfortunately, Carmel went cold at both ends of the floor in the second and third quarters, and lost the game 47-45. Only a late fourth quarter rally made the score as close as it was.

"We just didn't execute," said Padre assistant coach Ron Powell. "We weren't in synch that night."

R.J. Powell, who ignited the Carmel rally with three fourth quarter treys, finished the game with 15 points. Nate Stiles and Dean Wilson each canned two three-pointers, and finished with 14 and eight respectively.

On Friday the Padres hosted Gonzales, who came into the game with a lowly 2-8 record. The Spartans had a one-point lead after the first quarter, and they added to it, leading at halftime by the score of 23-20.

"We were just terrible," said Padre head coach Rich Frank.

Frank began the second half by benching four starters who hadn't performed well in the first half. Carmel did regain the lead, but then things got worse. The Padres allowed Vince Godoy to hit a last second shot to send the game to overtime, and his 26 points, including four three-pointers, gave Gonzales a 55-54 overtime win. The Padres had several opportunities to put the game away, but they missed four key free-throws down the stretch that could have won the game.

"The game was lost at the free-throw line," said Coach Powell.

"We made some really critical mistakes," commented Coach Frank. "We weren't playing with a lot of discipline, and things broke down."

The Padres are now 12-4 overall, but their 1-2 league record leaves them in fourth place. Carmel hopes to regroup this week as they play RLS and Palma, but that's easier said than done. Both teams have played extremely well so far in league play.

Girl's Basketball

The Carmel lady-hoopsters upped their record to 3-1 in league, and 11-3 overall with wins over Alisal and Gonzales last week. Doreen Evans led the Padres, scoring 30 points during the two-game stretch.

Last Tuesday, Carmel hosted Alisal, and dominated the game, winning by the score of 54-33. Evans scored 13, and Jen Rosenthal also added 13 points and seven rebounds.

Three days later the Padres traveled to Gonzales where they scored a 52-36 win. They jumped out to a 27-16 lead at the half, and never looked back. Evans had 17 points and 16 rebounds, and Erin Kraft added 10 points.

The Padres are tied for second place in the MTAL, as they prepare to face Notre Dame and RLS this week.

Soccer

The Carmel soccer team dropped its record to 1-5-1, and 3-7-2 overall, with losses to King City and Gonzales last week. Playing in King City last Tuesday, the Padres lost 7-0, and then dropped the Alisal game 2-0 on Friday. Santiago Lozano, Jono Spaulding, and Adam Conway played well for the Padres.

Ace in the hole

IT'S A rare scene these days. Bud's Pub on a rainy afternoon and he's there; playing poker with some cronies. Old memories hang in the air like mist and everyone knows everyone else's name, especially they know Bud.

A shy guy he is not, but these days his presence in the pub is a notable occasion. He spends most of his time in Florida now, but says he'll always have a headquarters here because his children and five young grandsons are in this area.

Bud Allen used to be the bad boy of Carmel; his reputation as a trickster is well known. He's offered men $1000 to shave off their mustaches; two accepted. One was especially proud of his well-waxed handlebar but couldn't resist the cash and deposited his 'stach in a beer mug on the bar in Bud's Pub.

Bud stories abound. He recently confirmed the white mice, baby alligator, six-foot-long iguana and flock of doves tales and added a new one involving a lagoon full of catfish.

He wore the mice, six of them, under his hat one Christmas Eve as he made the rounds spreading good cheer in Carmel. He would tip his hat to a lady and well, the mice were so cute. Later the SPCA chastised him and found the critters a good home. The alligators lived in the employee dining room at the La Playa Hotel when Bud was the owner.

"They were just babies, under a foot long," he recalled coyly, turning away briefly from his poker game. "We fed them live gold fish. You can bet no one lingered too long in that dining room. I spent more money feeding those gators goldfish than I spent on my employees."

The doves were part of another Christmas cheer project. The iguana, named Cortez, slept in Bud's bedroom and swam in the pool. The catfish, a mess of them, are in a lagoon that separates Bud's house in Florida from a local bar and restaurant. Recently, he swam from his house to the restaurant dock, through the fish, as the diners watched. He walked out of the water, into the bar and ordered a drink.

Bud Allen is known around town by his plaid-on-plaid attire, jaunty hat, quick wit and short-hand way of talking. "Where do you begin to describe him," muses 'Sweet Bill' Easton, who claims to have known Carmel's clown prince for 22 years. Easton gets up from his seat in the poker game. "He has charisma and he has balls," Easton says. "He's a character, he knows everyone from the bums to the top."

Linda, the waitress, walks by and whispers, "He's the most benevolent man I've met in my whole life," and the hint of another Bud Allen begins to emerge.

Easton likes to tell stories on Bud and recounts one occasion when the tables were turned on the jokester. It was Bud's birthday and his friends gave a party at La Playa. Black tie, cocktails, hors d'oeuvres, the works. After a toast and presentation, someone went outside, came back in and announced the limos had arrived. Mystified, but loving it, Allen hopped in with the rest and the party proceeded to K-Mart, where they feasted on hot beef sandwiches.

Back to the bar. Bud has turned his poker hand over to a woman named Jan and asks around, wondering out loud if she knows the game. A couple of regulars wink knowingly from across the room. Then he gets serious.

"It's not all the fun it used to be," he says matter-of-factly. "I'm disenchanted. Rents are too high and people here are spoiled."

Linda-the-waitresses's comment now bears closer examination. Bud Allen is reluctant to talk about the good deeds he does. And ask the Abalone Club and any number of local organizations or individuals who have witnessed his generous nature. Allen's causes are private and his gifts don't make newspaper print. He's a different kind of benefactor. Another long-time friend and member of the Abalone Club, Maxine Jennings, sitting at an adjacent table, summed it up as Bud returned to his poker hand.

"His good friends know how generous he's been."

A SAD NOTE

The youth of Carmel lost a true friend recently with the passing of Mike Semels, director of the Monarch Youth Soccer League. Semels was in the second year of his position and was instrumental in the growth of soccer on the Monterey Peninsula.

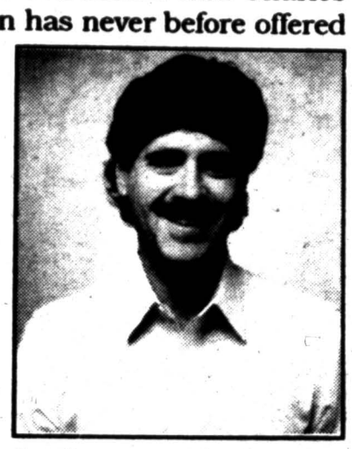
LOCAL FIRM SELECTED TO MINT CLINTON INAUGURAL MEDAL

The Carmel-based minting firm of Hoffman & Hoffman is minting the Official Inaugural Medal of William Jefferson Clinton. Clinton's selection of Hoffman & Hoffman's medal design over four other entries breaks with the 92-year tradition of the Official Presidential Inaugural Medal. It is the first time a California firm has won the contract, it is the first time the minting contract has not gone to one of two other American minting firms, it is the first time the President-elect has personally selected the medal design and it is the first time the back of the medal bears a pastoral scene.

Founded in 1980 by brothers Michael and Charles Hoffman, Hoffman & Hoffman has never before offered an entry in an inaugural medal competition. Over the history of the official inaugural medal, which dates back to 1901, two predominant American minting firms have consistently captured the ultimate minting prize — creating and producing the presidential inaugural medal. Hoffman & Hoffman pulled off a coup in being awarded the minting honor their first time out.



MICHAEL HOFFMAN

"We commissioned a sculpture way before the election," commented Charles Hoffman, the firm's director of operations and designer of the medal. "Basically, I felt akin to Clinton because we were two guys building our business from scratch. And we felt maybe we could take it away from the big guys."

Breaking with tradition, President-elect Bill Clinton personally selected the Hoffman's design from all five competing entries. Past medals have been nominated by the Inaugural Medals Committee who would choose among the competing portraits and submit its favorite to the president for approval.

The bronze inaugural medal, 2-3/4" in diameter, will sell for $35. The company is now working overtime to fill the demand and the brothers and their employees are doing it with enthusiasm. "Everyone is working very hard and we're all pitching in to get the job done," said Michael. "We're all really excited about making this medal. We have a real esprit de corps."

CHARLES HOFFMAN

The Official William Jefferson Clinton Inaugural Medal will be available through several means of distribution. They will be carried in the Clinton/Gore stores being established across Washington D.C., in Washington D.C. hotels, through catalogues and by direct mail. For more information on how one can purchase the Official Inaugural Medal of William Jefferson Clinton, please call Hoffman & Hoffman at 625-5333, or write to Box 896, Carmel, CA 93921.

A number of Trailside's most recognized artists, including members of the National Academy of Western Art, the Cowboy Artists of America, the National Academy and the New York Sculpture Society, will be joining the Gallery Americana artist roster.

Along with these contemporary artists, Trailside will offer works in all three galleries by past masters such as Frederic Remington, Charles Russell and the Taos Founders. A gala grand opening in Carmel is scheduled for May 15, and will be by invitation only.

Retire in Style

I visited many rental retirement communities in the area before deciding to move to Valley Heights.

I knew exactly the type of community I wanted to be a part of and found everything I was searching for at Valley Heights.

The atmosphere is warm and friendly. The residents are independent and active like I am.

The apartments are very spacious with lots of amenities just like my own home. I enjoy the full kitchen with a dishwasher, disposal and stove. I even have my own washer and dryer unit in my apartment.

Having the owners, Richard and Kelly on the premises seems to make quite a difference in the quality of the services. They have operated Valley Convalescent home for the past 30 years. It is comforting to know that assistance is available if needed.

Best of all Valley Heights creates an environment that allows me to maintain my independance by providing all the support services I need to remain active.

I appreciate the open seating in the dining room and the flexibility of being able to dine at my convenience, according to my schedule.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

For Andy with love

IT SEEMS that some of the kindest and most generous people are very quiet about their good deeds. They choose to remain anonymous and although I respect that, I wish I could publicly thank them for their tremendous love and support.

I am speaking in particular of an incredible friend of mine and of my pet foundation who has been more than generous through the years. This very dear person recently lost his beloved and Best Friend — Andy, a beautiful Dalmatian. I want to pay tribute to Andy as a way of saying thank you to his devoted master for his support and concern, not only for Andy but for all the others who are so in need. God bless you, my friend, and thanks for caring.

It pays to train...

It seems there are more and more top-notch dog trainers entering the field and I'm delighted to know that. I've talked about Susan O'Brien who does a terrific job here on the Monterey Peninsula. In Los Angeles, my pet foundation staffers have found another excellent trainer by the name of Jonathan Klein. We often receive calls from owners who want to "get rid of" their destructive or aggressive pets. Time after time, Jonathan has saved the day by teaching owners the language of pets so that they can learn to communicate and work together to solve problems. Jonathan has evaluated or worked with over 1,500 dogs in his five-year career and he is proud to have helped so many "problem pets" work through their problems and remain in their homes.

Obviously, Jonathan is not only a trainer, he is an animal person. His newsletter contains training tips but also excellent advice about spaying and neutering and being a responsible caretaker.

Our hats are off to you, Jonathan. You have taken great advantage of the opportunity to help the four-leggers and we're proud to be associated with you.

Thought for the day

"The greatness of a nation and its moral progress can be judged by the way its animals are treated."

— Gandhi

That's all for this time. See you next week!

(Written in collaboration with Judy Ruby, director, Doris Day Pet Foundation, Los Angeles).

Peninsula Palate

By Chef Wendy Brodie

The magic of Marchesi

A BREAK from my trip culinary adventures around the world to discover the Italian three-star Michelin Chef Gualtiero Marchesi of Milan right in our own backyard at The Bay Club at the Inn at Spanish Bay. Last week's Coast & Country column by Barbara March describes the impressive international weekend event and Marchesi's philosophy and approach to food. He is said to be the chef who defined the fine dining Italian restaurant of the eighties and nineties, creating modern Italian cuisine. One of his famous dishes is the open ravioli which he said was created by accident because of broken pasta, truly a wonderful concept.

During the weekend two of his dishes were demonstrated by his sous chef Davide Oldani and Chef Drew Previti of The Bay Club. They showed and tasted well and seemed quite fast to prepare, providing you have some fish stock which I think would substitute sufficiently for the lobster stock (which could be expensive to prepare, but it sure tasted sensational and was worth it).

Riso (Risotto) with Shrimp and Fried Herbs: 10 oz. Arborio rice, 8-1/2 cups fish stock, 1-3/4 oz. white wine, 2 Tbsp. burre blanc (onion, white wine, black pepper reduction,*), 4 Tbsp. butter, 2 cups reduced lobster stock, 1 lb. small shrimp (we call prawns, size 16/20 per pound), 8 parsley leaves, fried, 8 basil leaves, fried, salt and fresh ground white pepper. Melt 2 Tbsp. butter in a sauce pan. Add rice. Saute briefly, add white wine and reduce. Gradually add fish stock and reduce until almost dry, approximately 14 minutes. Remove from heat and rest 1 minute, stir in remaining butter and burre blanc. Season with salt and pepper. Risotto should have a creamy texture. Devein shrimp and saute in olive oil. Reserve. Presentation, plate the rice and lightly sauce with lobster stock. Center shrimp on rice and garnish with fried herbs. Serves 4 to 6. *This reduction is made by putting chopped onions in a saucepan with white wine covering the onions and reduced over the heat until almost dry and then seasoned with pepper, like you do for a sauce Bearnaise).

Halibut with Broccoli Sauce: 1-1/4 lbs. Halibut filet, 1/3 oz. shallots, thinly sliced, 3-1/2 Tbsp. white wine, 7 oz. cream (that has been reduced over the heat), 1/2 oz. butter, 7 oz. fish stock, salt and white pepper. Broccoli sauce: 10-1/2 oz. broccoli florets very small, 2 anchovy filets, 1 clove garlic whole, 3 Tbsp. chopped parsley, 2-3 Tbsp. broccoli puree (optional). Wash and clean broccoli and cook (blanch) with garlic in salted water. Drain and set broccoli and garlic aside. Chop the cooked garlic, anchovies and parsley until a paste is formed,(smear with side of the knife as you chop). Set aside. In a small pan combine 1/4 oz. butter, shallots, and halibut. Season with salt and pepper. Add white wine and fish stock. cover with aluminum foil and cook for 7 to 8 minutes or until fish is opaque. Remove fish, add reduced cream to the remaining sauce and reduce. Add garlic, anchovies and parsley and reduce to 3/4. Remove pan from heat whisk in remaining butter and broccoli puree if you have some for color and strain. Presentation, center halibut on plate, lightly sauce and garnish with broccoli. Makes 4-6 servings. When we were tasting this marvelous dish, some of us thought that sea bass, sturgeon, orange roughy would also be wonderful.

Thanks to John Chadwell, vice president of Pebble Beach, for creating this unique chef exchange program with Marchesi for the concept of The Bay Club, which has been in place for over a year now.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

God's 'law of love says it all'

ONE HUNDRED years ago, an eccentric Anglican deacon and mathematics professor at Oxford wrote Alice in Wonderland under the pseudonym Lewis Carroll. This novel appeals to both young and old, and many of its characters have become part of the world's folklore.

The duchess says, "Tis so; 'tis true; 'tis love that makes the world go 'round."

Having said this and argued that it is true, we can now argue that no four-letter work in the English language is so abused, misused and misunderstood as LOVE.

Once, on a trip to New York, I saw a powerful but morbid play by Graham Greene, The Living Room. In one scene, an elderly priest in a wheelchair berates his two old maid sisters over the suicide of their niece. "Do you think if she had come into a house where there was love, she would not have hesitated, thought twice, and talked to us?"

Oh Lord, help us to understand that your law of love says it all, and may we realize that love is so misunderstood in all walks of life because most of us are neither walking, jogging, nor running, but standing on the sidelines of life trying to hitch a free ride. Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

As the U.S. Peace Corps fills requests from Eastern European countries to send skilled volunteers, the average age of those selected is much higher than in other Peace Corps assignments. Unlike Third World countries which ask for basic agricultural and technical help, European nations seek seasoned business professionals. Among volunteers selected to go to Bulgaria for two years was Emil Schimelfenig, 61, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, a small-business consultant. He saw it as a two-way opportunity: "There's a lot to be learned."

Because of the guest list totaled more than 1,500 of the rich and famous, a birthday party for Brooke Astor was held in a huge New York City armory, elegantly decorated fro the occasion. It was her 90th, and she took the event in stride. The widow of Vincent Astor, who died in 1959, told an interviewer, "I never imagined 90. I used to think people at 40 were old." when she last renewed her driver's license, she read the eye chart without glasses.

By Scott Brearton

Just add water

WHAT BEGAN as a small-time garage operation back in 1988 has evolved into a full-scale business for local surfer and surfboard shaper Brent Bispo, a 29-year-old from Pacific Grove.

A true waterman, Bispo spent eight years fishing squid in Monterey Bay aboard the Junior, as skiff man and deck hand. The graveyard shift suited the lifestyle; his days were free to fine-tune his powerful surfing style.

"I loved the fishing and the hard work," said Bispo, "but the politics of fishing are a struggle to put up with. They pay you one thing one day, then the next day they pay you something different."

Bispo's shaping business evolved, in part, from frustration in dealing with most surfboard shapers. "They're eccentrics," he said. "They tell you one thing and they do another."

According to Bispo, when he began surfing 15 years ago, there was only a handful of local shapers – "Wayne Hyland, Jimmy McCafferty, and 'the mouth that roared,' a.k.a. Tom Bennet, or T-bone.

"In those days, the surfing population was so small (on the Peninsula), that there wasn't really enough demand to go big time," Bispo explained. "But like everything else, surfing has changed. The world is full of posers. A lot of guys just surf for the image."

An alternative

So, Brent started making boards for himself and his closest friends, providing an alternative to expensive commercial shapes with fancy airbrush designs and gloss coats.

Soon other surfers began to take notice of the high performance surfing going down on Bispo Surfboards and orders began to roll in.

Five years later, Bispo has shaped closed to 300 boards. Sunshine Surf and Sport, a Monterey surf shop, now orders four to five boards a month. Outside the Monterey Peninsula, Bispo has shaped custom boards for surfers from Oregon to L.A., and yes, Hawaii. He just picked up a new account with Humboldt Surf Industries in northern California, which he expects will boost his sales to new heights.

"Sunshine has really been a big sponsor," Bispo said. "They were willing to take a chance with me and have stuck with me since the beginning."

And his surfboards are reasonable. A basic board without color or gloss coat will only cost you $260, a far cry from the $450 you'll pay at most surf shops.

Being a shaper that surfs often and well has its advantages. By constantly testing his shapes in the most powerful waves he can find, he gains insight on how to improve them even more.

"I'm out in the water twice a day, five times a week sometimes," Bispo said. "All I do is surf and shape," he added. An enviable occupation indeed...

Over the years, Bispo and his close circle of friends – the "P.G. Posse" – have pioneered and turned rocky waves that were previously thought unrideable into known surfing spots.

Ranked number one

Ranked number one in the northwest conference of the National Scholastic Surfing Association (NSSA) Explorer Division, Bispo has taken the direct approach to advertising – proving his shapes work by winning contests on them. He is ranked fourth overall in the 25 to 36-year-old age bracket statewide.

Careful to give credit where credit is due, Bispo says he picked up pointers in surfing style from local legends Bucky Boynes, Billy Brewer, Wayne Hyland, Jim Schallerer, and Armin Yeager.

Bispo says his favorite shape is "a flat-bottom vee-tail tri-fin thruster, for power surfing instead of that butt wagging stuff."

He said he picked up some shaping tips while working with the Willis Brothers, an internationally-known pair of shapers from the north shore of Oahu. But he credits much of his technique to Steve Coletta, a Santa Cruz shaper.

Outside California, Bispo has traveled to Mainland Mexico, Baja California, and made four trips to the Hawaiian Islands.

He says his favorite surf spots are "anywhere within his reach and anywhere the crowds aren't."

Yes, this local boy makes good.

Be sure to think of your animals this winter!!

This year's unpredictable weather means a difficult time for your pets. Some pets, especially the young, the old, and the small are more susceptible to the cold. They should not be left outdoors during the winter. Pets feel the cold and the dampness just as we humans do. If you cannot avoid leaving a larger animal outdoors, the minimum requirements are: fresh water and a shelter with a flap over the door or baffles to protect from the wind. Shelters should be no more than 3 inches higher or 12 inches longer than the animal. This ensures that the animal's own body heat will keep it warm. The floor should be raised off the ground to provide protection from moisture and cold. Cats that are left outside should have a dry, warm spot to sleep in. If not, they often will climb under vehicle hoods to stay warm, so be sure to bang on the hood to scare any cats away before starting your car in the morning. Also, remember that anti-freeze is a toxic threat to children and pets. Be careful to clean up all spills and store it in sealed containers away from both children and pets!

We make a donation to SPCA the first time you use our service.

Rehearsals are held from 7-10 p.m. Tuesdays. Those upcoming concerts will feature major choral pieces by Poulenc and Charpentier.

The Bobs bobbing into town

MAJOR CRITICS have called them such things as "the unclassifiable a capella antidote to modern technology" and "sometimes funny, sometimes poignant, always wickedly clever."

And now Performance Carmel, bright series designed by City Cultural Director Brian Donoghue, will present The Bobs.

That vocalizing foursome will appear at 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 23, in Sunset Theater. Single tickets cost $12 and $14.50; they're available at the facility during regular business hours.

The program will feature songs from the next Bobs album — Shut Up and Sing — which is in production for springtime release.

The group's name did not come from a person, but from the dog show designation Best of Breed. Honoring that thrust, all members added a second appellation — Richard Bob Greene, Matthew Bob Stull, Janie Bob Scott, Joe Bob Finetti.

The San Francisco Bay Area unit has recorded four packages, been nominated for a Grammy, starred in two award-winning specials on PBS, guested on major nighttime TV shows, done soundtracks for several feature films and toured throughout this country and Europe.

Their PR packet says we need them. "Because, without The Bobs, life as we know it on this planet would cease altogether and we would be plunged into unimaginable darkness."

And: "The Bobs do not live in one big house in Berkeley and put cute notes to each other on the refrigerator."

And: "When tossed into a large tub of water, they rise immediately to the surface."

Good to know.

"The show looks at life through children's eyes," Laura says — "what they see, what concerns them, what they want to do in life, things they hope for and things that make them laugh. There are scenes and dances about parents, school, growing up, acceptance, friendship, jealousy, just being a kid."

Carmel Ballet Academy says this will be "the last chance" to see that particular production.

Advance word on concert confused just about everyone

By LYN BRONSON

THE MONTEREY Peninsula's blustery, rainy weather kindly let up for a few hours on Friday evening permitting the Mozart Society of California to present its second event of the season without pounding rain or power outages.

The Church of Religious Science in Monterey hosted a generous-sized audience as the featured artists of the evening, Eva and William Kinderman, delivered a interesting program of piano music by Mozart and Beethoven.

Advance publicity concerning this event managed to confuse just about everyone. It was certain that we were going to be hearing a program by two pianists, but it was not clear whether they were playing two pianos, one piano four-hands or sharing a program of solo piano music. Even some members of the board of the Mozart Society thought it was a recital for piano four-hands.

Lecture recital

As a matter of fact, although not advertised as such, it turned out to be something of a lecture recital where the spoken portion was at least as long as the playing. The recital consisted of three solo piano sonatas by Mozart and Beethoven and one set of Mozart Variations for piano duet. Although the musical portion was approximately an hour with intermission (a long 20 minutes), the evening lasted almost two hours and 30 minutes.

The lecture, totally the domain of William Kinderman, varied from the fanciful, including philosophical speculation about the meaning of various works by Mozart and Beethoven, to the practical with discussion, among other things, of the powerful effects of the diminished seventh interval in minor tonalities.

New genre?

Perhaps we are witnessing a new genre of concert which may be spreading from academia to provincial concert halls. While not quite a full-fledged, highly structured lecture recital with detailed illustrations, Kinderman's lengthy remarks were informal and meant to "educate" and possibly to entertain the audience.

In other words, he was providing us with extraordinarily extended program notes. Although he had much to say that was interesting and stimulating, nothing he said was quite as significant as the music itself, and I kept wishing he would get on with it and just sit down and play.

When he eventually got around to playing we heard a big, dramatic performance of Beethoven's Sonata in C Minor, Op. 111. Kinderman has a big technique equal to any challenge Beethoven could pose, and it is significant that he never exploited or distorted Beethoven to show off this technique.

It was honest playing. Kinderman proved himself equally master of the dramatic gesture and the intimate moment. He has a full palette of colors at his disposal and did not hesitate to use it.

If some of the supreme moments in the Arietta fell just short of the sublime, it was less Kinderman's fault than the age and condition of the Steinway he was playing. Some of the hammers in the treble when used in conjunction with the soft pedal do not strike the strings squarely, resulting in a pinched, nasally tone which occasionally marred the musical effect.

Her portion

Eva Kinderman opened the program with a full-bodied rendition of the Mozart Sonata in C Minor, K.457 — performed in the style of Beethoven. This is meant as a compliment, incidentally, since this Sonata goes way beyond Beethoven's early effort in C Minor, Op. 10, No. 1.

Mrs. Kinderman is obviously no believer in the "china doll" school of Mozart playing, although it could be wished that her playing encompassed more in the pianissimo to mezzo forte range.

After intermission she played a fast-paced version of Beethoven's Sonata in Bb, Op. 22, which, Kinderman had pointed out, has many Mozartian elements in it.

Together the Kinderman's played the one four-hand work on the program, the Mozart Variations in G Major, K.501, a charming performance marred only by the heavy-handed secondo playing of the gentleman.

The next time we hear the Kindermans, I hope he will condense his remarks into the form of concise written program notes and spend more of his time playing.

Issues exhibit invites artists

By JOHN DETRO

A CALL for artists to submit works toward a non-jury show at Pacific Grove Art Center (PGAC) has gone out countywide.

Stated theme of the April 3-23 exhibit: Pestilence & Famine. It's styled as a followup to the wide-ranging 1991 PGAC show The Subject Is War.

"The committee believes that artists now are working to express their feelings about AIDS, the homeless and famine," Chairperson Susan Long says.

"We need a venue to show these works. Artists are invited to enter any media — two or three pieces with the assurance of having one hung. Space availability will determine how many pieces end up in the exhibit."

Long offers to field questions. Call 624-4262.

CONTINUING THROUGH Feb. 9 at PGAC is the Monterey Peninsula Art Foundation show (Gill Gallery, Dyke Gallery, Hall Gallery).

At the same time, works by Roxana Keland may be seen in the Photo Gallery — "the Pyro Series which deals with flames and the light they produce."

The MPAF was founded in 1981, spokespersons note, "and its exhibit at the Art Center is the peninsula's largest showing of local artists. The (Foundation) is non-juried for both membership and inclusion in the yearly show. It supports adult education in the arts, provides scholarships to deserving students, lends its non-profit status as support for artists who are seeking grants."

CARMEL COFFEE and Tea Co. (in the Eastwood Building on San Carlos) will welcome artist Ray Magsalay into a free public gathering which starts at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 22.

"His work is inspired by Native American traditions and primitive folk art," according to program notes. "Ray paints and sculpts, being in addition a prize-winning Bonsai plant artist. This evening he will share all."

PACIFIC GROVE Museum of Natural History will hold a public reception for photographers Lovell and Libby Langstroth from 6-8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 22.

Then their exhibit — The Kelp Forest Beneath the Surface— will remain through March.

Carmel residents, the Langstroths have had three other shows at the same facility. All of the latest images have been printed by them in Cibachrome.

"This exhibit seeks to portray with color photographs the exquisite beauty of the organisms of the kelp forest and the communities in which they live," the announcement says. "The images and accompanying text serve to illustrate the fascinating natural history of the creatures with examples of predation, defense, camouflage, reproduction, mimicry — and an explanation of the movement of pigments through the food chain."

CENTRAL COAST Art Association will sponsor a "step-by-step wood cut demonstration" by Carmel Art Association member and local art teacher Julie Smith.

This will happen at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 25, in Room 10 of Sunset Center. The public is invited at no cost.

ART CONSULTANT Nancy Hirsch has been chosen to serve on the board of the Center for Photographic Art (Sunset Complex).

"I am pleased and delighted," said Hirsch, whose Carmel Valley business represents a number of photographic artists.

The funds were given in support of MPMA's current capital campaign to build the Jane and Justin Dart Wing at its La Mirada facility.

Unicorn group plays bard for boffo evening

By MATTHEW FRIDAY

THE SOFT and courtly strains of Elizabethan England faded into the dimly lit background as the Unicorn Theater Presents production of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night opened at the Wharf Theater last weekend.

Believing that Shakespeare can be a daunting challenge, my companion and I were pleased to discover a very competent, often comical, and generally well-paced performance.

From first appearances the work displays confidence. Carey Crockett's set design requires all the stage space available for a bold display, part magical (perhaps Illyrian), and part 16th century England. Its secrets are at once open and labyrinthine: plaster-daubed walls give way to unmarked doors and shadowed alleys, Tudor-like windows lean jauntily askew overlooking the faux cobblestone courtyard, and the whole scene seems dimly lit in olive green and sepia tones (an effect of the brush as much as lighting).

If a bit Dickensian, it is also otherworldly and exactly what Twelfth Night may suggest — if not demand.

Handy element

Handily, a synopsis in the program notes informs the audience of the plot, suggesting the confusion, role reversals and climactic partnerships one expects of the bard's comedies.

Word play, sexual allusions, a gender twist and some bawdiness elicit ready chuckles, while raucous guffaws are called forth in the lines between Sir Toby Belch (a Falstaffian character played with just a little caution by Lyonel T. Badger), and the pathetic Sir Andrew Aguecheek.

Played by Alan Badger, Aguecheek is hilarious: graceless, overstimulated and disjointed as a wooden puppet ("methinks sometimes I have no more wit ...a man of the strangest mind in the world") dangling drunkenly from the master's mischievous hand. Bringing sometimes lilting balladic melodies to the audience as well as dimensionality to the antics of those two clowns, Robert Colter's Feste provides a witty and capricious poet/fool, quick to catch the smug proprieties and illusions of Twelfth Night's principals.

Whether the sentimental and self-abnegating love of the Duke, (Thomas Burks' aptly somber, saccharine Orsino), or Carey Crockett's precious self-remove in the florid and gaseously pompous Malvolio, Feste sees through to almost every character's motivation and will use the interests of each to reflect for all a dramatic fool.

Swallowed

Malvolio will seem to pay hugely. An overlarge and tightly blackened sphincter where might've been a more whole man, he will feel swallowed eventually "in hideous darkness." Crockett delivers, somehow, a steward with pathos by the story's end — no mean trick for so small-minded a character.

Rebecca Meyers lends us the demure, unwary Olivia. Countess, and object of the Duke's unrequited love, she is a little pallid — particularly in contrast to Karen Uemura's mischief-maker Maria. Altogether confident on stage, Uemura combines the womanly realism, the cunning and practicality of Maria with a sure sense of intent and timing.

Elizabeth Shiply took the lead as Viola and, aside from some occasionally awkward blocking, was quite at ease, bringing focus, good humor, power and poise to a sometimes bewildering role.

Smooth crew

Simple props make effective set changes from any one scene to another and it seems a well-practiced crew, accessible and spontaneous.

If lines are mumbled occasionally the weakness is compensated in one another's readiness (or ability to make do).

A pleasure to see, overall, Twelfth Night will be playing at the Wharf Theater Thursday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., with a special performance on January 24.

For reservations call 655-3200.

Local history lecture set

THE FIRST Henry Meade Williams Local History Lecture was detailed this week by Director Lettie Bennet of the Williams Local History Room within Harrison Memorial Library's structure.

She said the free community forum will start at 10:30 a.m. Monday, Jan. 25, in the Park Branch Library at Sixth and Mission.

Initial territory to be covered: the life and work of Hugh and Mayotta Comstock, builder and dollmaker. Featured at the forum will be Harrison Comstock, Hugh's nephew, along with Mrs. Eleanor Hatlo Lusignan and Mrs. James Pruitt.

Fairy tale

Hugh Comstock designed and built the "fairy tale houses" most associated with Carmel, while Mayotta Comstock designed and made Otsy-Totsy Dolls. The first fairy tale house, said Lettie Bennett, was built to house those dolls.

"Harrison Comstock will loan three of his aunt's dolls for display," it was stated. "Also on display will be three charming wooden reproductions of the best-known fairy tale houses. Their creator — former Carmel Mayor Barney Laiolo."

Everyone who knew the Comstocks "is especially invited to share memories of this notable couple," Director Bennett said.

At the lecture, a brochure sponsored by Carmel Architectural and Historic Survey Committee (and dedicated to the late Marjory Twyner Lloyd) will be presented.

This is entitled Historic Houses, Number One, Carmel-by-the-Sea and includes eight buildings. Among these is the Duckworth Cottage.

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Heat wave

WHILE WE dry out from rainfall thick and chill, the scene covered by this space heats up considerably. Like so:

• Peter Meckel of Hidden Valley Music Seminars says the contractual dance has been completed. Wondrous jazz vocalist and composer Blossom Dearie will appear there in early March.

An old pal of Miss Dearie, Bob Dorough obviously told her about his gigs at Hidden Valley. She put out the word that she'd like to work the rural venue. More on all this later.

• Tim Jackson of Monterey Jazz Festival now irons out a detail or two before he makes known key acts for the 1993 edition. Believe me — they're knockouts.

I've promised to wait until Tim determines the availability of a certain vibes player. Powerful big band magic? You bet. And not the same old faces.

• Monterey Bay Blues Festival went after heavyweights. The Talent Committee's Lee Durley says B.B. King has signed on for the June 26-27 bash and will be the Saturday night headliner.

Additionally, five great ladies have been confirmed and "will all perform on the Sunday." The powerful vocalists: Etta James, Chicago's Koko Taylor, Ruth Brown, Katie Webster (Swamp Boogie piano queen too), Barbara Morrison.

Others who've agreed to terms: Nathan Williams Zydeco Band, the "really sensational" King Bizkit Blues Band from England, Deanna Bogart, Chris Cain, Clarence Carter.

At least one more major deal simmers.

Critic led onto mythic path by play

By JOHN DOTSON

AUDIENCES CAN rely on Staff Players Repertory Company to present ambitious works and by doing so nurture the cultural health of our community. And Marcia Gambrell Hovick ought always to be suspected of wily intentions in choosing the plays she produces.

I think I came upon a special myth-motif in Enid Bagnold's The Chalk Garden, the current production in a series of "classics concerning women."

In the Battle of the Trees ("what seems to have been the most important religious event in pre-Christian Britain," as Robert Graves tells it) the King of Annwm rises against a woman called Achren. These gender enemies were insurmountable unless his or her "secret name" became known. As it turns, Annwm is secretly "Underworld" and Achren is secretly "Trees." Something of this pattern enlivens this play as I see it.

Eye engaged

I was led onto this path by the set design and lighting by Nick Hovick. The consistency of the dusty pale ochre walls of "a manor house, Sussex, England" engages the eye with an impressionistic glow. (Such details as the fragrance of turpentine in the painting scene are affecting.)

Director Philip Clarkson stays true to his stated vision of a "series of characters who are doing the best they can" acknowledging the British sensibility that nuance is everything. Still, we are asked, "Do you take things here at face value?" That's an opening for wonder.

The true antagonist is the invisible father-figure, the incorrigible Pinkbell, butler-familias. Retired and aging in his quarters, Pinkbell is something of the King of the Underworld in his "corklike dryness" engaging feminine nemeses with dominating and "incorruptible ritual."

The lady of the house, Mrs. St. Maughm, admits she has "always, always been afraid" of him: "In 40 years he has never been corrected." Miss Madrigal observes acutely his "shallow knowledge of the laws of growth."

Combatant

As Miss Madrigal, newly hired governess, Marcia Hovick fulfills the role of a "pathological imaginer" for whom "things grow . . . during the night." As an empowered combatant using vast vegetable powers, waging battle with "diluted cow urine" if need be to overcome chalky soil and social paralysis, Madrigal understands that "Soul cannot give what it has not got," and states plainly how important it is to notice that "the child is screaming in the garden."

Janice O'Brien's performance of Madrigal's employer, Mrs. St. Maughm, has a tone of antique silver with deeply tarnished crevices. Her character carries the inner contradictions of patriarchal matriarchy.

She is "middle class failing to run away from the unusual." This splitting is evidenced not only in her terror of Pinkbell but also in her description of her manservant, Maitland: "Since we have no subject race we must be served by the sick, the mad and those who have no place in the outside world."

She demeans him and needs him and admires him. In such discrepancy, her personal power is ultimately "disregarded" and "defrauded" in her own house — no match for the underworld. Madrigal judges: "Even your garden is demented."

Crisp work

Olivia, adult and angrily departed daughter, crisply played by Andi Hogan, bears her feminine power shadowed both by her mother's lack of resolve and projection/rejection of her as a modern Delilah. Not empowerment but rather the imposition of alienating collective values is Olivia's inheritance from her mother: "Where is it now? The success toward which I pushed you? . . . Love can be had any day."

Laurel, "Delilah's daughter," briskly played by Bryce Parker, rages on unimpressed by established knowledge that would reduce her precocious possibility to male-dominant psychosexual theory: "Shall I go fetch the book that explains me?"

Though her ambiguous youth has been so generally violated that she finds herself "fond of screaming," Laurel bears the flames of change that mother wishes to reclaim and grandmother indulges (as a failed crone's fantasy) "like a porcelain on the shelf, cracked in some marvelous way for the better."

Only Madrigal knows the urgent responsibilities of remembering that children are supposed to surpass their elders.

Michael Kelly as Maitland convincingly conveys his character's predicament as eternally novice to Pinkbell, nurse and nanny to the nymph Laurel, and sympathizer with feminine powers, as one who dreams as "all butlers dream of gardening."

Steve Harris wears well the starched but crumpled role of the Judge, blatantly identified by Mrs. St. Maughm as "Puppy."

Like Pinkbell, the Judge holds loosely the reins of foundering patriarchy — in his own recognizance "an old creature with a memory," one "not good out of my setting," where the objective is to "ignore the heart and satisfy justice."

In versions of the Battle of the Trees, sometimes the name of the tree goddess is guessed, and sometimes the name of the underworld king is stolen.

As mistress of this garden, Miss Madrigal in the end sings out her own secret name to confound the Judge, and at the same time Pinkbell passes to his final repose "stiff as a rod, the poor old bastard." Ponderable metaphors for our day.

By John Detro

Jerry and Jay

The Naked First Lady. By Jerry Stern. Illustrator: Jay Campbell. 126-page softcover in midsized table format. $12.95.

The subtitle provides a solid tip as to contents — "bare facts from Monterey's past." Peninsula attorney and writer Jerry Stern treats historical facts lightly. Jay Campbell's drawings lend the project a loony edge.

That nude first lady? The spouse of Alta California Governor Pedro Fages.

Stern: "On the trip to Monterey she was troubled to see that the Indians wore no clothes. So touched was she that she began giving the Indians much of her and the Governor's wardrobe, until he warned that the clothes could not be replaced in Monterey. Upon learning that there were no dressmakers in the area, she became very upset and insisted on returning home. When her husband refused to go, she barred him from her bedroom for months. She then accused him of having an affair with an Indian girl and moved to the mission."

Elsewhere: "Carmel has an appeal no one can resist. Aimee Semple McPherson, the noted evangelist, denounced the evils of sin in radio broadcasts and in person. She was very successful...One day in 1926 she disappeared. When she reappeared, she claimed that she'd been kidnapped and taken to Mexico. Only later was it disclosed that she'd had a secret liaison in Carmel with her broadcast manager."

And on the next page: "For more than 50 years a small black lady called Aunt Fairy Bird lived on Fifth Street in Carmel in a modest shack. She had been Charlie Chaplin's cook. She and her husband Tom served as the 'handy people' for many in Carmel. When Aunt Fairy Bird died at the age of 90, her executor found hidden among old newspapers many uncashed Social Security checks. The old shack became the object of a bidding war...Today, it is the site of the popular Casanova Restaurant."

Sharp focus

The great, the small, the cocky and crazed — all enjoy the sharp focus of Stern's research. There's nothing really new or earth-shattering here, but it's an enjoyable journey.

Jay Campbell seems with this number to have entered a new phase of development. While retaining his vibrant pen-and-ink line, he trades airy "hometown sketches" for a look that's funky and gnarled — as if to remark upon the constancy over the many decades of "modern" neurosis. His monk gives off the same mad glint as the bandit and the politician.

Campbell tells me this book probably will lead to a series. So far, the Jerry and Jay Show has much talent and material going for it.

At a point and in print, Stern courteously thanks Jeffrey Whitmore "for his help in editing this book." Whitmore's no less than a satirist who deserves national attention — as writer, cartoonist, inventor of wild punch lines.

NOTICE TO ALL INTERESTED PARTIES OF THE TERMINATION OF THE RECEIVERSHIP OF NATIONAL BANK OF CARMEL CARMEL, CALIFORNIA

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC"), as Receiver of National Bank of Carmel, will terminate the Receivership on March 4, 1993.

The FDIC is a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the provisions of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, 12 U.S.C. Section 1811 et seq. On the 8th day of May, 1984, the Comptroller of the Currency (hereinafter "comptroller") found National Bank of Carmel (hereinafter "Bank"), to be insolvent and it was closed by said comptroller pursuant to his authority under 12 U.S.C. Section 191. Subsequently, the Comptroller appointed the FDIC as Receiver of the Bank pursuant to Title 12, U.S.C. Section 191 and 1821 (c). The FDIC accepted said appointment and undertook the duties of Receiver of the Bank, pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 1821 (e). Title in, and possession of, all the assets, property, and businesses of the Bank passed to the FDIC.

Pursuant to an order of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California on May 11, 1984, and subsequent orders of the Court, the FDIC as Receiver of the Bank was authorized, with certain limitations specified in the order, to sell any asset of the Receivership of the Bank and to compromise any bad and doubtful debts. The FDIC as Receiver of the Bank has continuously engaged in the liquidation of the assets of the Bank, including pursuing such claims as were available, since the date of closing of the Bank. The amount due creditors of the Bank, after application of liquidation assets upon such debts, establishes that such creditors will incur a loss of $4,974,993 and no excess funds will be available for the receivership to distribute to shareholders of the failed Bank.

All further claims against the Receivership will be forever barred.

The FDIC in its Corporate capacity has prepared a complete accounting of the activities of the Receivership, and such accounting has been approved and affirmed by the FDIC as Receiver of the Bank. A copy of the balance sheet can be obtained by contacting Frank Estrada at the address below. The records of the receivership should be disposed of the compliance with applicable law and record retention guidelines of the FDIC. The duties of FDIC as Receiver of the Bank have been fully discharged, and there is nothing further to do in the liquidation of said Bank with the exception of paying the final expenses of the receivership.

Based upon the foregoing, it is in the best interests of the public, creditors and shareholders of the Bank that the receivership be terminated. The FDIC is authorized to terminate this Receivership administratively pursuant to 12 U.S.C. S1821(c) (2) and (d) (13) (D) (1989).

Wherefore, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation as Receiver of said failed Bank proposes by this Notice that on March 4, 1993: the Receivership shall be terminated. The acts and accounting of the FDIC as receiver for the Bank and in its corporate capacity shall be confirmed. The FDIC shall have the sole discretion to dispose of the records of the failed Bank. All further claims against the Receivership shall be forever barred. The FDIC, in its receivership and corporate capacities, shall be fully released and discharged from any further duty, obligation or liability in connection with the liquidation of said Bank, and any claim, suit or action against the FDIC in its corporate capacity or in its capacity as receiver or liquidator of said Bank or against its directors, officers, employees, representatives and agents shall be forever barred.

If any person has any claim or wishes to oppose the termination of the Receivership of National Bank of Carmel, such claim or objection must be served by certified mail on or before the 11th day of February, 1993, on the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, ATTN: Frank Estrada, 2870 Zanker Road, Suite 200, San Jose, CA 95134. Written objections must clearly specify the grounds upon which they are based, including citation of supporting legal authority, if any, or they will be forever barred.
